Spray Your Shrubs Now

Spray them with Tarsol!

I part in 500 of water if you want to make a good job of it. It is very essential for the welfare of your Houses, Plants, Shrubs and Trees that you spray them this month or they are liable to become the swarming place of destructive insects. Tarsol is a harmless and positive death to insects.

UNFOUNDED MAUDLIN SENTIMENT.

We have read many favorable comments of Southern newspapers on the—to us—humiliating and disgusting spectacle of grizzled Confederate veterans breaking ranks in the parade at Memphis to greet General Fred Grant with effusive demonstrations of affection. It is not claimed that Fredrick Dent Grant has ever done anything to merit distinction of any kind; he holds his commission simply because he is the son of his father, to whom it is said he bears a striking resemblance. The old vets broke ranks to fondle him as the vicarious representative of his father. It is in order then to inquire, what did the elder Grant ever do to entitle him to what is claimed to be a spontaneous overflow of affection from the hearts of those who assume to be representatives of the Lost Cause and of the Southern people? No satisfactory answer to this question ever has been or ever can be given.

As an enemy General Ulysses Simpson Grant displayed qualities which entitle him to our respect. We can testify from personal knowledge that he generally observed the usages of civilized warfare and except in a few instances was not unnecessarily harsh in his treatment of those who fell into his power. He was president of the United States and personally the most influential man in the country during the darkest days of reconstruction and he might have done a good deal more than he did to ameliorate the sufferings of our people. He made no serious effort to stay the tide of hate that rolled over us in successive waves during the entire eight years of his administration. Why then should we sloop over with maudlin sentiment at sight of his son? There are hundreds of Confederate veterans who never attend the reunions because there is more pain than pleasure in such experiences.

All over this fair Southland "The Land We Love"—the mosquito continues to slay its thousands and the house fly its tens of thousands.

Two of the wealthiest women in America, Mrs. Russell Sage and Miss Helen Gould, are universally beloved. It is because they are using the money that came to them without their seeking for the good of mankind and for the glory of God. How different the spirit of their benefactions from that of the Rockefellers and the Carnegies!

All nations teach that the wanton destruction of life is a crime. When people know, as everybody now knows, that the greater part of transmissible diseases are conveyed by the housefly and then fall or refuse to put up proper screens and use other simple means to control this pest they are really guilty of murder and should be dealt with accordingly.

THE MAJESTIC NECHES.

"If the Beaumont enterprise continues to sing the praises of the Neches that insignificant stream may become as famous as the Yarrow or the Avon."—Bryan Eagle.

Insignificant stream? Ye gods. Do you know that you are referring to the third stream in depth in the United States, a stream that attains a depth of 100 feet, and in which, between Beaumont and its mouth the navies of the world might ride and not be crowded? Why, man, there are men now in the city whose homes are three hundred miles inland, away up in the center of East Texas, and they have made the trip to the Southeast Texas metropolis upon the bosom of this stream you are deriding.

Insignificant, forsooth. The Neches river is destined to add more to the wealth and glory of Texas than any other stream within its borders. Come over and we will take you for a ride on the best river in the southwest, and when you have returned you will never again malign the stream, for you will know whereof you speak forever after. It will be a memory of delight that will linger with you as long as there is breath.—Beaumont Enterprise.

MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.

Profs. Nagle and Potts of the A. and M. College, who are making the inventory of the property of the Bryan Water, Ice, Light & Power Co for the city of Bryan, are getting along splendidly with the arduous task. Mr. Preston and the other officials of the plant are giving them all the assistance possible, which greatly facilitates the work. They had a force of hands at work today on Main street making excavations so that they could take a look at the big lead water mains and determine their exact condition. It is to be hoped that the entire matter relative to the purchase of the plant by the city will be adjusted satisfactorily to all parties and without further hitch.

AN INNOCENT VICTIM.

Swinburne and the Grouchy Head Master of Eton.

Once when Algernon Charles Swinburne was traveling back with his father from school at the end of one of the terms they entered a carriage in which the then head master of Eton, who was buried in the Times, was seated.

"Isn't that Dr. —?" the admiral whispered to his son. "I believe it is," stammered young Swinburne reluctantly. After a rebuke at the apparently careless answer the admiral "accosted the awful presence" with "Dr. —, I believe, sir?" The doctor was plainly annoyed at being disturbed by a stranger. "Well, sir," pursued the admiral, "my boy here has just finished his first term at Eton, and I should very much like to know what account you can give of him." As a matter of fact, the doctor had not set eyes on young Swinburne before. "Enraged, however, I suppose," Swinburne afterward related, "at my father's rather unconventional interruption, which he had no doubt considered a slight on his dignity, he glanced down at me with a senile face and said deliberately, 'Your boy, sir—your boy is one of the very worst in the school,' and then intrenched himself once more behind the Times."

At Paddington there was a storm. In vain young Swinburne protested that the doctor had said what he had out of pure vexation, but the father declared that he would take the word of the head master, and Swinburne was deprived of all pleasures and privileges for the duration of the holiday.—Dundee Advertiser.

A GREWSOME BEQUEST.

Extraordinary Legacy by the Father of Lord Audley.

Probably the most gruesome bequest ever named in a will was that made by Philip Thicknesse, a dissipated Englishman, who died in 1792. Some years before his death he had quarreled bitterly with his son, Lord Audley, and to spite him had placed on the outside of the family mansion a board bearing this inscription in large black letters:

"Boots and shoes mended, carpets beat, etc., etc., by P. Thicknesse, father of Lord Audley."

Finding he was about to die, he sent for his lawyer and drew up a will containing the following extraordinary clause: "I leave my right hand, to be cut off after my death, to my son, Lord Audley. I desire it may be sent to him in hopes that such a sight may remind him of his duty to God after having so long abandoned the duty he owed to a father who once so affectionately loved him."

The dead man's wishes were scrupulously carried out, and his severed hand, inclosed in a hermetically sealed leaden casket, was forwarded to his son. There is no record as to how Lord Audley received his unwelcome legacy or how he disposed of it.—New York Press.

Try This This Summer

There will come many times this summer when the heat will be almost unbearable. And your thirst will refuse absolutely to be quenched by plain water, or the average sweet soda fountain drinks or bottled beverages.

DRINK

Coca-Cola

You will be surprised and delighted at its cooling effect and at how completely it will quench your thirst. You will find it as refreshing and delicious a summer drink as coffee is a winter drink. And it's as pure and wholesome—as harmless as the tea, or coffee, or milk, or cocoa you drink at the table every day of your life.

But do not be deceived into accepting a substitute—refuse any other drink that claims to be as good or better. Insist on and Chicago, April 15, 1907.

We beg leave to report to you the results of analysis of Coca-Cola. We purchased in the open market an original package of one gallon of Coca-Cola. The contents of this jar were submitted to a very careful and exhaustive analysis for cocaine and alcohol, and we failed to find any trace of either. Caffeine was found to the extent of 2 of one per cent. The amount of caffeine contained in one ounce of Coca-Cola used for making one glass of the prepared drink is less than one half that is contained in a cup of coffee of average strength.
Very respectfully submitted
